CONTRIBUTION AWARD

AUGUST 2008

Brazil, 2008.

Joseph Eshun has been contributing to the success of AIESEC ever since he joined AIESEC in 1989.

Joseph identified strongly with what AIESEC stands for and was determined to devote a lot to the organization, spending five years developing Ghanaian youth in his local committee. During his term as a president of AIESEC in Ghana, the country was announced best performing in the African region. In 1993, Joseph was selected to be part of the AIESEC International board, where he served as a director of Africa and as Vice President Finance. His internship in Kenya was the start of his career in the audit and professional services, where he managed to grow to a Partner of Deloitte for East Africa in less than 10 years.

Throughout his fast-paced career, Joseph has always found time to support AIESEC in any way possible. Being a member of the National Advisory Board of AIESEC in Tanzania, where he

"Seven years as BOA member for AIESEC in Tanzania, Joe shaped AIESEC both by providing opportunities for members as well as supporting the organization in its strategic direction, the incredible contribution that made us proud today!"

currently lives, he has been providing advisory and mentoring support to at least 6 generations of leadership of AIESEC Tanzania. His contribution to AIESEC ranges from providing trainings to the membership, to raising internship positions and financial partnerships for AIESEC. In addition to the contributions from Deloitte, he has been making personal donations to AIESEC for more than five years now and just recently supported financially the representation of Tanzania at the AIESEC International Presidents Meeting. Joseph was also the one, who made possible the first AIESEC alumni event in Tanzania.

Joseph's strive to support the local community extends beyond his involvement in AIESEC – he was selected as the Chairman of the selection committee for the Human Rights Commissioners of Tanzania in 2008 and is also currently responsible for the management of a $56 million HIV/AIDS program on behalf of USAID and the Government of Tanzania.
