AIESEC CONTRIBUTION AWARD

Malaysia, 2009.

It was in 1989 when after the fall of the Iron Curtain in Germany, Mr. Hannes Chopra became President of AIESEC in this country.

His responsibility was to run a strong restructuring process in Germany in order to improve the performance of LCs and involve the recent opened ones from the East Germany.

His main impact was in consolidating and refocusing the organization (specially business models and finances), he started different campaigns on the issue of xenophobia, a very important one for Germany society at that time because of political events, and strong focus on involving and developing the initiative groups from Eastern Germany.

In 1994, he got his Master degree on Economics at the University of Friburg. And two years later he joined Allianz to work in the International Operations department, coordinating Africa, Middle East, and Southern Asia.

" Meeting him – is the time to gain inspiration, comfort and motivation. His personal warm approach breaks the difference between statuses of volunteers and CEO and makes us believe that our life will be the way we build it."
